What Makes a Dad

*God took the strength of a mountain,
The majesty of a tree,
The warmth of a summer sun,
The calm of a quiet sea,
The generous soul of nature,
The comforting arm of night,
The wisdom of the ages,
The power of the eagle's flight,
The joy of a morning in spring,
The faith of a mustard seed,
The patience of eternity,
The depth of a family need,
Then God combined these qualities,
When there was nothing more to add,
He knew His masterpiece was complete,
And so, He called it ... Dad*

Forming Fathers Today

Prepare your family for heaven by building a domestic church on earth

By Father Carter H. Griffin

Editor's Note: This article is adapted from the booklet The Gift of Fatherhood, which is available on the Fathers for Good website.

What is the role of a father? Every dad asks himself this question at some point, and coming to the right answer is vitally important in our time, when the very notion of fatherhood is trivialized and undermined by popular media and cultural trends.

What may be called the fullness of fatherhood has its origin in God the Father, who shares his life-generating capacity with all men—both those who procreate biologically and those who live for others as single or celibate persons.

What is God's fatherhood like? It is safe to say that God loves generating life. You see it on a beautiful day, as nature is teeming with life, and you see it in the wonderful diversity of persons whom God has made in his own image. Only God can create an immortal human soul, and thus he is rightly called the Father "from whom every family in heaven and on earth is named" (Eph 3:15).

Of course, the word "father" usually refers to a man who has children. Biological fatherhood is a great blessing, yet the responsibility does not end on the physical level. A child needs to be raised through faith formation and human education, and this takes time, attention and self-giving.

When a man looks at his child, something happens. His heart changes, or it should. Fatherhood fixes his gaze on the beloved child and draws a man out of himself. Any sacrifice or hardship becomes worthwhile for the sake of the child who has captured his heart. But change can be painful. A man has to stretch his limits, mature, live in the present and work for the future. A man who does this truly takes hold of his fatherhood.

Yet despite good intentions, men may lack perspective. They love their kids, but what is their role as day-to-day dads? Are they still needed as providers and protectors? Should they assert authority or offer quiet guidance? Unfortunately, with widespread divorce and family separation, and few positive father figures in popular culture, a man may lose his way.

Perhaps the best place to start today is with an ancient Christian concept retrieved by the Second Vatican Council—the domestic church. It combines a father's spiritual and temporal duties under one roof, affording fathers both a natural place and a definite role in leading their families in the everyday practice of the faith.

Men must not shrink from their important leadership role in their family, which is to be exercised with humility, joy, grace and love. We're not talking about domination of family life, but rather a dying to self so that others may grow and thrive. The ultimate goal of fatherhood is to generate children of God. That's the Christian version of a man's mission in the domestic church—humbly leading others to their God-given potential and ultimately to life with our Father in heaven.

This mission is worthy of every man, but it is not easy. How to build a domestic church? Begin with God at the center. Pray with your wife, who is your equal partner, and branch out into family prayer with the children. Look to the needs of others through the corporal and spiritual works of mercy. Place all of this upon a foundation of love, forgiveness, sacrifice, support, self-discipline, humility and grace. Dad, it starts with you. As we celebrate Father's Day this month, strive to become a father from the Father's heart by laying the foundations for your domestic church.
